

Dear Modesto Neighbors,

Less than 2 months into office, your new Modesto City councilmember

Jenny Kenoyer

is planning to break her campaign promise to preserve prime farmland!

When asked how important farmland preservation is to Stanislaus County, Jenny Kenoyer replied, “Farmland preservation is probably one of the most important things that is so important to us. Agriculture is the base of our economy” and *“I'm really concerned our council that is there now is not really concerned with preservation of ag land.”

Yet at the January 7, 2014 Modesto City Council meeting, Jenny Kenoyer indicated that she supports annexing the prime farmland west of 99 known as Wood Colony for development. She was quoted as saying,

“I don't care what the people of Wood Colony think, they don't vote for me.”

Your neighbors in Wood Colony need your help to protect their homes, their farms, and their families' farm heritage!

Please e-mail or call your councilmember, Jenny Kenoyer and request she stick to her campaign pledge to preserve farmland and not vote to pave over family farms in west Modesto.
